Curious, baby deer
strolls across
a small valley.
An old red and white
church catches his attention.

Can you find baby deer?

Sarah Levert

In autumn,
baby deer enjoys
the smell of the orange,
red and yellow foliage.
There he takes a drink
from the lake and
continues on his way.

Can you name the color
of the lake?

Baby deer hears many
sounds: the wind rustling
through the leaves,
a cascading river
alongside a bicycle path,
and wheels of a bike.
Baby deer sees a large
house on the other side of the river; it must be
for a big family.

Listen to the sounds
all around you.

Myrianne Lalonde
Brownsburg-Chatham

Surprised, baby deer
finds himself on a
very busy street.

Where are all these people going? He follows them and discovers
a flea market filled with fruits and vegetables.

What can baby deer
eat?

Baby deer enjoys the sound of the cascading river. He would like to have fun like the people in the boat but he is afraid.

What is baby deer afraid of?

Baby deer arrives
in a magical place
filled with lines, squares,
rectangles and circles.

Can you find shapes
in the orange church?

Baby deer goes around the nice houses alongside the river bank. He takes time to look at the water
making its way down
the canal.

Can you count the houses
alongside the canal?

Vickye B.-Morin
Village de Grenville

Tired, baby deer rests.
There he is calmed
by soothing music.
He dreams of a
mysterious animal.

Can you describe
the mysterious animal?

Finally back home
in the forest, baby deer
is proud to tell his parents of his many discoveries. Nothing is more comforting
than the love of mommy
and daddy.

The most magnificent discoveries start with you!

It's never too soon to introduce a child to reading. Embracing your baby, talking to him, reading and pointing out the illustrations, awakens him to his physical, emotional and cognitive environment.

Furthermore, in a world where reading and writing are part of everyday life, this ritual of reading to a baby creates a habit that will follow him throughout his childhood.

From the time he is born, talk to your baby, sing him a song, dance with him, name objects around him, clap to the rhythm of your favorite nursery rhymes or poems.

Tell him stories. Although he may not understand the meaning of what he is hearing he will enjoy it.

Offer your child multiple reading opportunities and ask him which one he prefers. Take him to the library where you will make amazing discoveries. Provide him with an attractive reading corner. Read to him as often as possible.

Awakening a child to reading and writing is an amazing family adventure, a gift to last a lifetime.

Baby enjoys books
and takes pleasure in looking at the illustrations.

Take a stroll with baby deer and discover the many treasures of the Argenteuil region.
